Breakout Session Descriptions
Breakout Sessions

Center for Teaching Excellence – English Language Proficiency Program: CTE-ELP provides linguistic support year-round for international graduate students who wish to communicate more effectively with American English speakers, especially undergraduate students. At this session, you will learn about the variety of programs and services that are available, whether you are currently eligible for a teaching assistantship, and how to become eligible. You will also hear a brief overview of the English Language Proficiency Exam (ELPE).
Target Audience: Students who are not native speakers of North American English and desire professional development in communication.

Distance Graduate Student Panel*: A virtual panel of distance graduate students will answer questions about their personal journey as a graduate student at Texas A&M, how the experience of a distance graduate student is unique, and give tips for graduate school success.
Target Audience: Distance students interested in hearing the experiences of other distance students at Texas A&M.
*Panel will be conducted over Zoom and streamed to virtual and in-person students; staff members will facilitate hybrid participation.

Doctoral Student Profile and Feedback System: Learn how to utilize Texas A&M’s new, all-in-one platform for collecting and reviewing doctoral students’ scholarly activities. This system streamlines information about all aspects of doctoral engagement for students and their faculty committee members. Doctoral students will not want to miss the opportunity to find out how to leverage this helpful tool.
Target Audience: Doctoral students interested in learning how to curate their scholarly activities in an easy-to-use system.

Establishing Your Scholarly Identity as a Graduate Student – University Libraries: This session will cover the basic aspects of creating a scholarly identity. In this session, we will talk about researcher information systems, such as ORCiD, that allow scholars to track their citations and create research networks. This session will be of interest to all graduate students.
Target Audience: Graduate students interested in researcher information systems.

Financial Management During Graduate School – Money Education Center: Keeping track of your money as a graduate student can be stressful. Find out how to establish an effective money management system to help reduce your financial stress in grad school.
Target Audience: Students interested in personal financial management.

Intercultural Communications Skills in the Academic Setting* – International Student Services: Increased awareness of diverse cultural communication styles within academia can be a critical component to scholarly success. This session will focus on how communication in the differs from styles abroad, giving students the skills to develop solutions to overcome potential issues of miscommunication.
*Streamed session for virtual and in-person students; staff members will facilitate hybrid participation.

The ‘Other’ Education: Professional Development Beyond the Classroom* – Graduate Resources and Development for Aggies Professional Development Program: Graduate education is about so much more than advanced coursework! This session will summarize some of the activities (including virtual resources) designed to support your development into a highly qualified professional in your field.
Target Audience: Students interested in professional development.
*Streamed session for virtual and in-person students; staff members will facilitate hybrid participation.

Introduction to the University Libraries*: This session will introduce students to the locations and services of the University Libraries. In addition to learning the basics, like why to study and how to get books and articles, attendees will learn about advanced services, like subject librarian service and research data management.
Target Audience: Students interested in learning how to best utilize the University Libraries.
*Streamed session for virtual and in-person students; staff members will facilitate hybrid participation.

Student Activities and Leadership: The Department of Student Activities creates and fosters leadership and involvement opportunities that enhance personal, interpersonal, and organizational development of students and student organizations. Come learn how to get involved on campus and develop your leadership potential while in Aggieland.
Target Audience: Students interested in learning about and/or joining student organizations.

Tips for Grad School Success*: Learn strategies to help you excel in graduate school, including networking, time management, avoiding burnout, and getting to know the culture of your academic program.
